

Editorial

Chophayom Journal, Volume 28, Issue 3, November to December 2017 was published with the aim to develop the standard of Humanities and Social Sciences journal to reach the quality as the medium for exchanging academic knowledge, supporting, and publishing academic works and researches. We, the editors and the team, have determined to develop the quality of Chophayom Journal resulting in the numbers of the Humanities and Social Sciences research articles in this journal that reaches 36 articles and one review article titled I AM MALALA “The girl who stood up for equal rights for women, education for every child and was shot by Taliban”. The articles in this journal are qualitative and quantitative research articles. The articles are useful research and development that can absolutely benefit Humanities and Social Sciences field, develop profession and people’s way of life, and also promote studies on Humanities and Social Sciences research and development.

Finally, Chophayom editor team would like to express our gratitude to all experts of our editor team who gave suggestion and recommendation that result in our journal quality improvement. Additionally, we would like to show our gratitude to all academic officers who supported us and gave us advices about the publishing. We would like to thank you all authors who published with us and also the readers as well. All involved people mentioned earlier are our significant power which make us move firmly to the 29th year of Chophayom Journal.

Asst. Prof. Dr. Chomphunut Makemuengthong
Editor of Chophayom Journal